HISTORY

The Chicago Cubs are one of the oldest teams in Major League Baseball. The team started in 1869 and was originally called the White Stockings. From 1890 to 1898, the team had a lot of different names, including the Colts, Orphans and Cowboys, before officially being named the Cubs in 1907.

Hard-hitting Fact: New York Yankees player Babe Ruth hit his famous “called shot” home run off of Cubs pitcher Charlie Root during Game 3 of the World Series on October 1, 1932. During his at-bat, Ruth apparently pointed to a spot in the outfield bleachers and then hit the next pitch near where he pointed.

Seventh-inning Stretch at Wrigley Field:

The tradition of singing “Take Me Out to the Ball Game” during the seventh-inning stretch started in 1982 with Cubs announcer Harry Caray. Today, the Cubs continue Caray’s tradition by inviting guests, including former baseball players, other sports stars, actors and celebrities, to sing the seventh-inning stretch each game.

Did You Know: After each game, the Cubs raise a flag above the center-field scoreboard to let fans know if they won or lost. Today, the Cubs fly a white flag with a blue “W” if they won and a blue flag with a white “L” if they lost. Fans also are known to bring “W” flags to home and away games and wave them after a Cubs win.
