This week we are featuring the Giants Creation Letter from December 6, 1882. William Hulbert, the second president of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, was determined to make baseball respectable, even if it meant kicking the largest city in the United States out of the National League. One of his acts was to expel the NL original team from New York for refusing to complete their 1876 schedule of games - granted the team was not very good, this was extremely unprofessional. As a result, Hulbert issued a lifetime ban to the City of New York to ever join the NL.

However, once he passed away in April of 1882, this ban was lifted by the NL’s new president and the rest makes for Giants history.

Each week we will highlight a Giants season ticket member or members who are stepping up during this tremendous time of need. This week we salute the work of club level season ticket members Stephen and Lisa Ingerson.

The duo has worked with Baxter International Inc., a global leader in acute care, to bring in EUA (Emergency Use Authorization) dialysis filter, Oxiris, as a new tool to treat patients with COVID-19. Some of the guidelines they developed are being used in the Department of Defense COVID-19 practice management guide and these best practices are making a difference.

May 6-12 was National Nurses Week and they couldn’t be more proud to be a nurse as the world battles the COVID-19 pandemic. Nurses, along with other health care workers, are on the front line, battling the deadly virus each day. Stephen and Lisa are in awe with how the medical community has come together, across state lines and other countries, to share best practices about different wood densities and bat models and was able to minimize the amount of trial and error to a pretty good degree.

What is your favorite movie theater snack? DL: Peanut butter M&M’s are definitely at the top of the list. My mom grew up in Fremont, and my dad lived in San Francisco in his early twenties, so that’s why I grew up in Fremont.

You obviously break down swings for a living now but as a kid growing up, was there a swing that you wanted to emulate? Maybe a swing of your favorite player? DL: I actually copied a lot of different players’ swings growing up. When my brother and I would play whiffleball in the backyard, we had a rule that you had to use the batting stance of the player you were pretending to be. So I tried a ton of different batting stances in the backyard growing up. I tried to copy Edgar Martinez when I was young. I also copied Barry Bonds, Ken Griffey Jr. and Mike Piazza at various points when I was young. Prior to taking this position, had you spent much time in the SF Bay Area? If not, what are you looking forward to seeing/exploring the most? DL: My mom grew up in Fremont, and my dad lived in San Francisco in his early twenties, so I’ve spent a fair amount of time around the Bay Area. We usually came to California once or twice a year when I was growing up. I was always most excited about going to a either a Giants or A’s game depending on which team was in town. The atmosphere at the ballpark was always exciting, and it was fun watching the players that I saw on TV. I had a lot of fun going to the Exploratorium and Aquarium as a kid as well. More recently, I’ve enjoyed going to Warriors games and exploring the different restaurants in The City.

May 17-23 is National EMS Week, which brings together local communities and medical personnel to honor the dedication of those who provide the day-to-day lifesaving services of medicine’s front line. This week also marks the 150th anniversary of ambulance services in San Francisco. Manager Gabe Kapler sent a message of support to celebrate these Bay Area heroes.

Each week we’ll get to know the new Giants coaches with a few fun questions in this space. This week it’s Director of Hitting / Assistant Hitting Coach Dustin Lind.

You started a bat company, Cutthroat Bats, while you were in graduate school. Where did the name come from and how much bat-making experience did you have prior to that endeavor? DL: The name of my old bat company comes from cutthroat trout which are native to Montana. I enjoy fly fishing and wanted to name the company after something that had a regional significance, so I settled on Cutthroat Bats. I had turned a few bats in my high school wood shop class, so I had a general idea of how to make a wood bat. A lot of the specifications required for professional quality wood bats were new to me, so there was a lot of learning that happened in the year leading up to starting that company. Looking back, I was actually pretty calculated with how I went through the process of learning about different wood densities and bat models and was able to minimize the amount of trial and error to a pretty good degree.

I also copied Barry Bonds, Ken Griffey Jr. and Mike Piazza at various points of my youth. By the time I was about 11 or 12 my favorite player was Jason Giambi and I started copying his swing from that point until I got to high school.

GABE KAPLER

Each week, Manager Gabe Kapler will give us some of his favorite food spots from around the US, in no particular order.

The vibe at Revere in Washington D.C. is inclusive. Chef Casey from Camelback Desert sent us the recipe and it's become one of our favorites.

The tomato soup recipe is a bit of modified take on my daughter Elle's favorite lunch at school and the thing she was most excited to make in her after school "Iron Chef" program. Chef Casey from Camelback Desert sent us the recipe and it’s become one of our favorites.

The "pros" for baseball included long drives, playing under the lights, being able to travel, doing something you love and being part of a team. The "cons" for baseball included missing the attention but her death was sudden and unexpected.
