Giants partner Alaska Airlines has launched an online contest to celebrate the return of baseball. New or existing mileage plan members can register at Alaska.com/SFGiants for the Alaska Airlines Million-Mile Home Run Sweepstakes. One winner will be chosen at random at the end of the season to win the Million Miles, redeemable to travel with Alaska and its Global Partners to more than 800 destinations worldwide. To sweeten the deal, every time a Giants player hits a home run, 1,000 miles is added to the jackpot. Each week during the 60-game 2020 season, Alaska Airlines will select one winner to receive roundtrip air travel and tickets to Giants 2021 Spring Training in Scottsdale, Arizona.

The second issue of The Gamer, the Giants newest publication, features Manager Gabe Kapler on the cover and is available for free to read online. In this issue, fans can read up more on the newest Giants skipper, take a look at who made the club’s 60-man player pool for this shortened season and learn more about versatile Giants infielder Wilmer Flores. Fans can also take a peek at the new rules for the 2020 campaign and preview the Giants opponents for this season after they were adjusted to accommodate the shorter 60-game campaign. Click here to read today.

The Giants’ Juan Marichal pitched the 50th shutout of his career, a 1-0 squeaker over Montreal. He led all active hurlers in this category. Box

Cali Hubbard’s first Major League victory was a 4-0 shutout of the Phils. He’d be 10-6 down the stretch and pick up 18 wins with the Giants.

Willie Mays hit a game-ending home run to give Gaylord Perry and the Giants a 1-0 win over Houston.

The Giants hit three successive homers in the 4th inning, with Joe Moore, Alex Kampouris and pitcher Bill Lohrman connecting. The Giants added four more home runs in the game to beat the Phils 11-2.

The San Francisco Giants erupted for four homers in support of Ryan Vogelsong’s 10th win in a 5-2 beating of the Marlins. The first homer, hit by Cody Ross in the 3rd inning off Chris Volstad, was a two-run shot that broke a record string of 21 consecutive solo homors by Giants batters since July 6th. For his part, Brandon Belt hit two solo homers later in the game.

Randy Winn (right) became the 21st player in Giants history to hit for the cycle. The fleet flychaser, obtained from the Mariners two weeks earlier, singled in the 1st, homered in the 3rd, doubled in the 4th and completed the feat with a triple in the 6th inning.

Mike Yastrzemski hit three home runs and drove four runners in, becoming just the second rookie in franchise history with a three-home run game, joining Jarrett Parker (September 26, 2015 at Oakland). It marked the 31st three-plus homer games in franchise history and 19th in the San Francisco era (since 1958). Yaz also became the first Giants player in franchise history to hit three homors out of the leadoff spot in the lineup.

Mike Yastrzemski shares the hitting advice he gets from Hall of Fame grandfather, Carl, along with his mental approach at the plate, and how the game has shifted without the intensity of playing in front of fans. Yax also describes the excitement of his first splash hit being a walkoff and his outlook on the Giants’ postseason chances this year.
the orange and black again, but the cast on his left arm was too big for arm while pitching on August 15, 1989, Dravecky was determined to wear supporting his teammates in the 1989 World Series. After breaking his arm motions. (House had helped pitchers like Nolan Ryan, Charlie Hough and Jamie Moyer throw into their 40s, and Brees and Brady are doing the same in football.) “As life would have it, things came full circle,” Sam says. “It worked out great for me and my roommate…For Father’s Day, I got Tom to sign his book. It was pretty cool.”

As life would have it, things came full circle,” Sam says. “It worked out great for me and my roommate…For Father’s Day, I got Tom to sign his book. It was pretty cool.”

“The full look at Dave Dravecky will be online starting Thurs-day,” Sam says. “The scouts were just as impressed with Sam’s character as they were with his pitching. “Some would arrive early enough to see Sam get off the bus,” Garcia says. “They wanted to see: how is he interacting with his teammates, how does he go about his business to prepare for the game? Does he ‘big league’ people? Sam wasn’t that way. . . . He was just a good guy.”

He was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels in the 14th round in 2009. That was a renowned draft for the Angels: Their haul included Mike Trout, Randal Grichuk, Garrett Richards, Patrick Corbin, Tyler Skaggs. But the Angels didn’t get Sam. He opted to attend Vanderbilt University in Nashville instead. “My dad took the reins on that,” Sam says. “I wasn’t ready physically or mentally to pro ball right away.”

The summer before his senior year, he attended a baseball camp at Vanderbilt, which coach Tim Corbin (no relation to MLB’s Patrick) had built into a Southeast Conference powerhouse. Corbin remembers Selman as very thin, “probably 140 to 145 pounds. I think that’s generous, if his hair was wet.” Sam doesn’t disagree: “I was a late bloomer. I hit a growth spurt really late. I was 6’3” and 155 pounds.”

Sam was a starting pitcher all four years in high school, drawing national attention. “It was the first time little St. Andrews ever had any experi-

The full look at Dave Dravecky will be online starting Thurs-day,” Sam says. “The scouts were just as impressed with Sam’s character as they were with his pitching. “Some would arrive early enough to see Sam get off the bus,” Garcia says. “They wanted to see: how is he interacting with his teammates, how does he go about his business to prepare for the game? Does he ‘big league’ people? Sam wasn’t that way. . . . He was just a good guy.”

He was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels in the 14th round in 2009. That was a renowned draft for the Angels: Their haul included Mike Trout, Randal Grichuk, Garrett Richards, Patrick Corbin, Tyler Skaggs. But the Angels didn’t get Sam. He opted to attend Vanderbilt University in Nashville instead. “My dad took the reins on that,” Sam says. “I wasn’t ready physically or mentally to pro ball right away.”

The summer before his senior year, he attended a baseball camp at Vanderbilt, which coach Tim Corbin (no relation to MLB’s Patrick) had built into a Southeast Conference powerhouse. Corbin remembers Selman as very thin, “probably 140 to 145 pounds. I think that’s generous, if his hair was wet.” Sam doesn’t disagree: “I was a late bloomer. I hit a growth spurt really late. I was 6’3” and 155 pounds.”

The full look at Dave Dravecky will be online starting Thurs-day,” Sam says. “The scouts were just as impressed with Sam’s character as they were with his pitching. “Some would arrive early enough to see Sam get off the bus,” Garcia says. “They wanted to see: how is he interacting with his teammates, how does he go about his business to prepare for the game? Does he ‘big league’ people? Sam wasn’t that way. . . . He was just a good guy.”

He was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels in the 14th round in 2009. That was a renowned draft for the Angels: Their haul included Mike Trout, Randal Grichuk, Garrett Richards, Patrick Corbin, Tyler Skaggs. But the Angels didn’t get Sam. He opted to attend Vanderbilt University in Nashville instead. “My dad took the reins on that,” Sam says. “I wasn’t ready physically or mentally to pro ball right away.”

The summer before his senior year, he attended a baseball camp at Vanderbilt, which coach Tim Corbin (no relation to MLB’s Patrick) had built into a Southeast Conference powerhouse. Corbin remembers Selman as very thin, “probably 140 to 145 pounds. I think that’s generous, if his hair was wet.” Sam doesn’t disagree: “I was a late bloomer. I hit a growth spurt really late. I was 6’3” and 155 pounds.”

The full look at Dave Dravecky will be online starting Thurs-day,” Sam says. “The scouts were just as impressed with Sam’s character as they were with his pitching. “Some would arrive early enough to see Sam get off the bus,” Garcia says. “They wanted to see: how is he interacting with his teammates, how does he go about his business to prepare for the game? Does he ‘big league’ people? Sam wasn’t that way. . . . He was just a good guy.”

He was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels in the 14th round in 2009. That was a renowned draft for the Angels: Their haul included Mike Trout, Randal Grichuk, Garrett Richards, Patrick Corbin, Tyler Skaggs. But the Angels didn’t get Sam. He opted to attend Vanderbilt University in Nashville instead. “My dad took the reins on that,” Sam says. “I wasn’t ready physically or mentally to pro ball right away.”

The summer before his senior year, he attended a baseball camp at Vanderbilt, which coach Tim Corbin (no relation to MLB’s Patrick) had built into a Southeast Conference powerhouse. Corbin remembers Selman as very thin, “probably 140 to 145 pounds. I think that’s generous, if his hair was wet.” Sam doesn’t disagree: “I was a late bloomer. I hit a growth spurt really late. I was 6’3” and 155 pounds.”

The full look at Dave Dravecky will be online starting Thurs-day,” Sam says. “The scouts were just as impressed with Sam’s character as they were with his pitching. “Some would arrive early enough to see Sam get off the bus,” Garcia says. “They wanted to see: how is he interacting with his teammates, how does he go about his business to prepare for the game? Does he ‘big league’ people? Sam wasn’t that way. . . . He was just a good guy.”

He was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels in the 14th round in 2009. That was a renowned draft for the Angels: Their haul included Mike Trout, Randal Grichuk, Garrett Richards, Patrick Corbin, Tyler Skaggs. But the Angels didn’t get Sam. He opted to attend Vanderbilt University in Nashville instead. “My dad took the reins on that,” Sam says. “I wasn’t ready physically or mentally to pro ball right away.”

The summer before his senior year, he attended a baseball camp at Vanderbilt, which coach Tim Corbin (no relation to MLB’s Patrick) had built into a Southeast Conference powerhouse. Corbin remembers Selman as very thin, “probably 140 to 145 pounds. I think that’s generous, if his hair was wet.” Sam doesn’t disagree: “I was a late bloomer. I hit a growth spurt really late. I was 6’3” and 155 pounds.”

The full look at Dave Dravecky will be online starting Thurs-day,” Sam says. “The scouts were just as impressed with Sam’s character as they were with his pitching. “Some would arrive early enough to see Sam get off the bus,” Garcia says. “They wanted to see: how is he interacting with his teammates, how does he go about his business to prepare for the game? Does he ‘big league’ people? Sam wasn’t that way. . . . He was just a good guy.”

He was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels in the 14th round in 2009. That was a renowned draft for the Angels: Their haul included Mike Trout, Randal Grichuk, Garrett Richards, Patrick Corbin, Tyler Skaggs. But the Angels didn’t get Sam. He opted to attend Vanderbilt University in Nashville instead. “My dad took the reins on that,” Sam says. “I wasn’t ready physically or mentally to pro ball right away.”

The summer before his senior year, he attended a baseball camp at Vanderbilt, which coach Tim Corbin (no relation to MLB’s Patrick) had built into a Southeast Conference powerhouse. Corbin remembers Selman as very thin, “probably 140 to 145 pounds. I think that’s generous, if his hair was wet.” Sam doesn’t disagree: “I was a late bloomer. I hit a growth spurt really late. I was 6’3” and 155 pounds.”

The full look at Dave Dravecky will be online starting Thurs-day,” Sam says. “The scouts were just as impressed with Sam’s character as they were with his pitching. “Some would arrive early enough to see Sam get off the bus,” Garcia says. “They wanted to see: how is he interacting with his teammates, how does he go about his business to prepare for the game? Does he ‘big league’ people? Sam wasn’t that way. . . . He was just a good guy.”

He was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels in the 14th round in 2009. That was a renowned draft for the Angels: Their haul included Mike Trout, Randal Grichuk, Garrett Richards, Patrick Corbin, Tyler Skaggs. But the Angels didn’t get Sam. He opted to attend Vanderbilt University in Nashville instead. “My dad took the reins on that,” Sam says. “I wasn’t ready physically or mentally to pro ball right away.”

The summer before his senior year, he attended a baseball camp at Vanderbilt, which coach Tim Corbin (no relation to MLB’s Patrick) had built into a Southeast Conference powerhouse. Corbin remembers Selman as very thin, “probably 140 to 145 pounds. I think that’s generous, if his hair was wet.” Sam doesn’t disagree: “I was a late bloomer. I hit a growth spurt really late. I was 6’3” and 155 pounds.”

The full look at Dave Dravecky will be online starting Thurs-day,” Sam says. “The scouts were just as impressed with Sam’s character as they were with his pitching. “Some would arrive early enough to see Sam get off the bus,” Garcia says. “They wanted to see: how is he interacting with his teammates, how does he go about his business to prepare for the game? Does he ‘big league’ people? Sam wasn’t that way. . . . He was just a good guy.”

He was drafted by the Los Angeles Angels in the 14th round in 2009. That was a renowned draft for the Angels: Their haul included Mike Trout, Randal Grichuk, Garrett Richards, Patrick Corbin, Tyler Skaggs. But the Angels didn’t get Sam. He opted to attend Vanderbilt University in Nashville instead. “My dad took the reins on that,” Sam says. “I wasn’t ready physically or mentally to pro ball right away.”

The summer before his senior year, he attended a baseball camp at Vanderbilt, which coach Tim Corbin (no relation to MLB’s Patrick) had built into a Southeast Conference powerhouse. Corbin remembers Selman as very thin, “probably 140 to 145 pounds. I think that’s generous, if his hair was wet.” Sam doesn’t disagree: “I was a late bloomer. I hit a growth spurt really late. I was 6’3” and 155 pounds.”