Following the civil war, segregation became inevitable, especially in the game of baseball. African Americans were not allowed to play in the National Association of Amateur Base Ball Players, but they continued to find opportunities with traveling teams until the Negro National League was formed in 1920. The National Negro League launched with eight teams across the country (one of them being the Detroit Stars!) and was the catalyst for many baseball legends.