Pitching gloves have webs that are distinctively designed for pitchers who want to conceal the seams of the ball they’re throwing, while generally being lighter than a traditional fielder’s glove. The design is a closed-webbing pattern that helps keep the ball out of sight longer than your traditional infield glove. The actual glove itself is identical to an infield glove as the size of pitching gloves usually range from 11.5 – 12 inch.