On July 16th, 1909, The Detroit Tigers played the longest scoreless game in American League History. Ed Summers pitches the entire game holding the Nationals to 7 hits, 2 walks, and 10 strikeouts in 18 innings of work. The game was called after the 18th inning as the score was still 0-0.